Acknowledgement

After a long period of months, today is the day; writing the note of appreciation is the finishing touch on our research. It has a period of intense learning for us not only in the research paper, but also in our personal level. We would like to give our appreciation to those who support and help us to achieve this study.

We would like to give our gratitude to Dr. Elvira Del Gado our research teacher for her efforts in guiding us and sharing her time and knowledge towards our research subject.

This research paper would not be possible without the students of JBLFMU-Molo who participated and answered the question, and for that we would like to thank all of you.

We would also like to thank our parents who were so supportive and understanding. Thanks for giving us motivation, care, and love.

To the Lord Almighty, we are grateful for so many things. Thank you for the strength you have given to us. Thank you for keeping us safe always. We thank the Almighty God for his spiritual guidance and direction that he gave to us. Thank you for making this research possible.

Abstract

This study entitled "The Advantages of Being an Only Child of John B. Lacson Foundation Maritime University-Molo" was conducted to determine the advantages of being an only child in John B Lacson Foundation Maritime University Molo. Generally, this study intends to explore and determined the advantages of being an only child.

This study aims to describe the advantages of being an only child in the students of JBLFMU-Molo. Specifically, it will answer the questions what are the advantages of being an only child, how does it feel to be an only child and how did only children cope up in life without having a sibling/s.

A Qualitative case study method will be utilized in this study. This study will be conducted at fifty-five students of JBLFMU-Molo through questionnaires. We tend to use case study to meet the expectations of the people. It is based on an in-depth investigation of a single individual, group or event to explore the causes of underlying principles. The respondents that we chose was random students of JBLFMU-Molo.

As an only child they have more advantages than those who have siblings especially in the relationship between their parents and friends. They also have a lot in common with students who have siblings. Despite of being alone they felt happy and contented to the fact that they are blessed enough to have everything they want and need.

Therefore, we conclude that being an only child has more advantages than those who have sibling/s. It has a positive effect not only to those only children but also to the society for it contributes in having a productive people. We prove that only children are independent, has an excellent character/personality and always stands out especially in academics despite of the stereotypes that people always say about them.

We highly recommend to the youth that they should study well and focus more in their academics in order for them to become more productive citizen of the country just like the only children. The youth must be inspired by the works of an only child. They should also be serve as a role model of their peers.
